Building a Revolution
Chinese Architecture Since 1980
Charlie Q.L. Xue

“This book will be greatly useful for many Asian architects seeking to position themselves in a competitive global community of architects, while seeking to develop their own independent architecture.”
— Dr. Ken Yeang, Malaysia

“This most interesting and informative book will be widely welcomed as there is little available in the English press on the new architecture of China. The original research is commendable and the text and illustrations provide an authoritative reference on the subject.”
— Professor Jennifer Taylor, Australia

“A rare and comprehensive historical analysis of contemporary Chinese architecture written in English. Native architect, Charlie Xue, who has witnessed first-hand the revolutionary developments in Chinese architecture over the past 25 years, presents a detailed and engaging account of the country’s emerging architectural landscape.”
— Professor Kengo Kuma, Japan
